Young Adult eligibility certification form

New York state has passed health laws that give an opportunity to young adults to remain covered under their parents' group health insurance plans.

Under the young adult option of the law, unmarried young adults living, working or residing in New York state will be able to remain covered under their parents' group health insurance plan. This will be possible even if the dependent reaches the age at which he/she would have otherwise aged off the policy, often age 19 or 23, or when no longer a student. To be eligible for this coverage, he/she does not have to be financially dependent on his/her parent.

The young adult must meet these eligibility requirements:

- Must live, work or reside in New York state
- Is age 29 or less
- Is not married
- Is not insured by or eligible for health care coverage through their own employer
- Not covered under Medicare

The law provides two distinct ways in which coverage may be extended: a "make-available" rider and a "young adult option" Some eligible employers may choose the "make-available" rider and define dependents as being young adults through the age of 29..

Subscribers in an eligible employer group that does not choose to offer the "make-available" rider may choose the "young adult option, themselves as a direct-bill option, allowing their young adult the same coverage as the parent or guardian carries. The rate for this option will be equal to a single rate policy.

When does the elected coverage take effect?

- For an election made within 60 days of "aging out," the effective date is the date the young adult would otherwise have lost coverage
- For an election made during the required open enrollment period, after a change in circumstances that newly qualifies the young adult, or the "special election period," the effective date must be no later than 30 days after the election and payment of the first premium

If you have any questions concerning the "make available" or "young adult" law, please contact Customer Service at the phone number listed on your member identification card.
